

The government has gone too far in removing limits on station ownership. Several of the local radio stations that I listen to are now owned by Clear Channel Communications. All carry identical news feeds and use the same music playlists. This has reduced both the variety and the quality of the news and entertainment offerings available in my area.

I am not concerned with the total number of stations that a single entity may own. I am very concerned with the loss of competition and subsequent loss of variety and quality within my local market.

Sincerely,
Gary Chilcote
